Hello,

As long as your game is only shown in school you are free to use our music without a license! You can buy the track as a personal use license and then use it in your game.

If you were ever to submit your game to an online steaming service or sell it, that is when you'd need to pay for a license from us.

I would like to use your music as background audio for a student, non commercial, video game project at Aston University. The game will be demonstrated in front of about 150 other students for 5 minutes. After that will only be used as an example in a group portfolio for future employment.

The game is called \'Peril\' and is inspired by the board game \'Risk\'.
